Marshall Diggs

To go above and beyond so that people feel cared for as a whole person.

With a background as a teacher mentor, principal, community leader and keynote speaker, Marshall's role at Growth Culture, as Director of NALP20, perfectly combines his passion for teaching and inspiring educators, with his strengths in appraisals, coaching and mentoring.

He is a regular speaker at conferences both nationally and internationally and has a wealth of experience providing transformative education training in the areas of effective leadership, culture-building, innovation, strategy solutions for team leaders, and innovative teaching practice. His strengths include effective communication, creating positive relationships, building relational trust and developing effective teams.

Having recently completed his Master's in Education Leadership (Hons), he is deeply committed to supporting schools in crafting leadership pathways and their own blueprint of effective and innovative practice. Marshall enjoys reading widely, keeping up to date with the latest trends and developments in education, as well as storytime with his four spirited children. Family life is a priority for Marshall and his wife, and together they enjoy weekly date nights, the outdoors for family adventures, and travelling around NZ.
